Medical Alerts Dr. Reichmister present findings from recent medical studies. He highlighted increasing evidence that both smoking and edible cannabis use, even as infrequently as three times per week, can result in respiratory effects similar to tobacco use, with edibles posing the higher risks due to the inconsistent dosing. He also cited data linking prenatal cannabis exposure to lower birth rates and higher risks of perinatal mortality. He cited a study from Iowa that emphasized that no level of lead exposure is considered safe, noting that regulatory agencies have progressively lowered the acceptable amounts and now recommend that any detectable amount is viewed as harmful. Dr. Reichmister shared encouraging results from a Chicago study on allograft bone and cartilage transplantation, where the majority of athlete study participants returned to their high-level sports and the non-athlete study participants reported significant pain reduction.

Commissioner Jefferson inquired about the safety of fluoride in drinking water and Dr. Reichmister affirmed that its continued use is based on longstanding dental recommendations, while acknowledging the debate on its use. Commissioner Forrester inquired about the use of the new non-opioid pain medication, Journvx. Dr. Reichmister noted that early research supports its effectiveness but raised concern about its high cost compared to existing non-narcotic alternatives. He did remind the Commissioners that these studies were sponsored by the pharmaceutical companies. Chair Quinn questioned if the use of this medication can prevent opioid addiction release. Dr. Reichmister acknowledged its potential as part of a broader range of non-opioid options.

Adjournment: Upon a motion by Commissioner Forrester and seconded by Commissioner Jefferson, and upon a unanimous vote, the meeting adjourned at 10:35 a.m.
